MOON - EARTH'S NATURAL SATELITE

MOON

Moon is Earth's only natural satellite and is the fifth-largest moon in the Solar System. It is about one-fourth the size of Earth and is located approximately 384,400 kilometers (238,855 miles) away from our planet. The moon has been a subject of fascination for humans for centuries and has had significant cultural, scientific, and practical importance.

Here are some key points about the moon:

Phases of the Moon: The moon doesn't emit its own light; instead, it reflects the sunlight that strikes its surface. As the moon orbits the Earth, the relative positions of the moon, Earth, and the sun cause different parts of the moon to be illuminated, resulting in the different phases of the moon (new moon, crescent, first quarter, gibbous, and full moon).
